Letters learned in the second series:

s m n h c u e

We have two ways of writing the letter "I" – the little "i" and the big "I".

i I

We usually use the little "i" in the middle of a word.

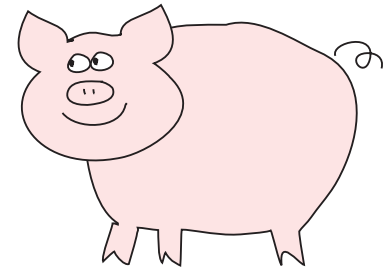

And we use the big "I" when we talk about ourselves, like when we say, "I am me," or "I ate my lunch."

I am
sleepy

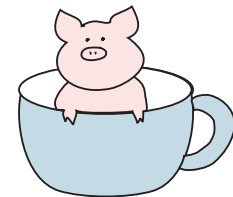

I did not
eat the cake

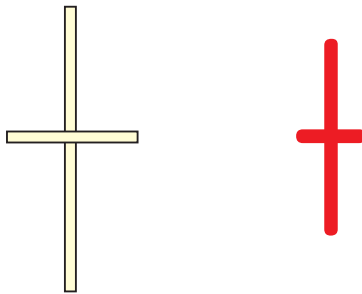

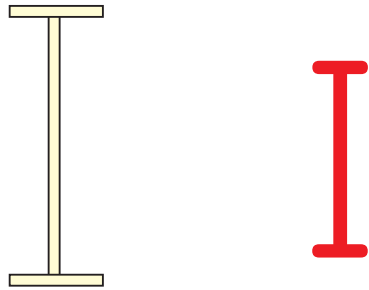

I am a
big pig

I am a little pig in a little
cup.

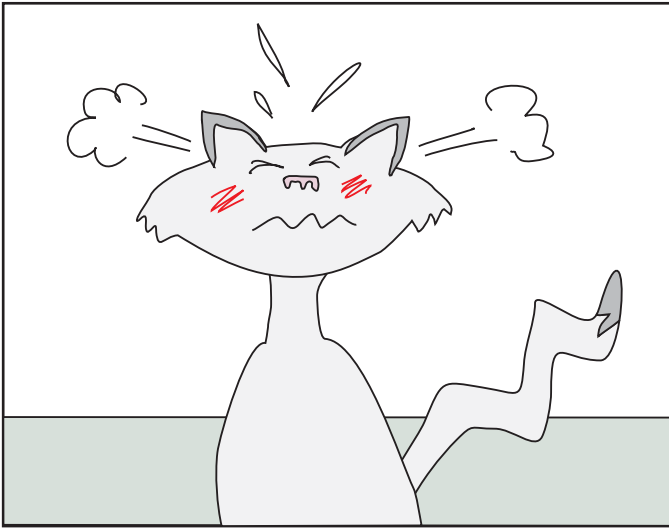

The big letter "I" looks a lot like the letter "t," except that the big letter "I" has TWO little sticks, while the letter "t" only has one stick.

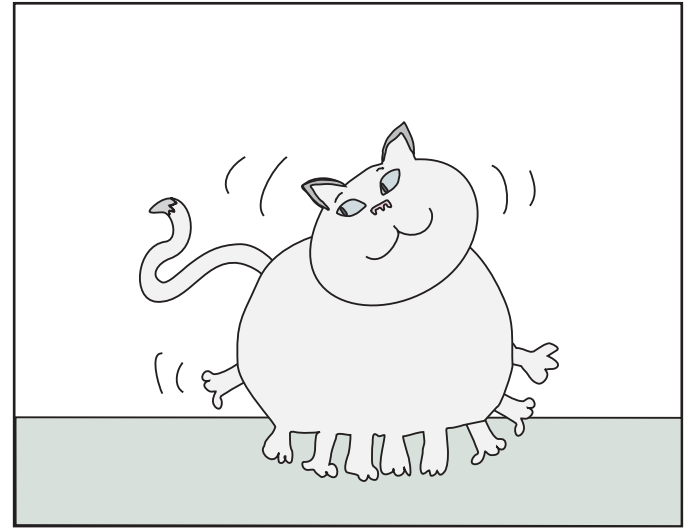

The big letter "I" also looks a lot like the letter "L," except that the letter "L" doesn't have any sticks at the top or bottom.

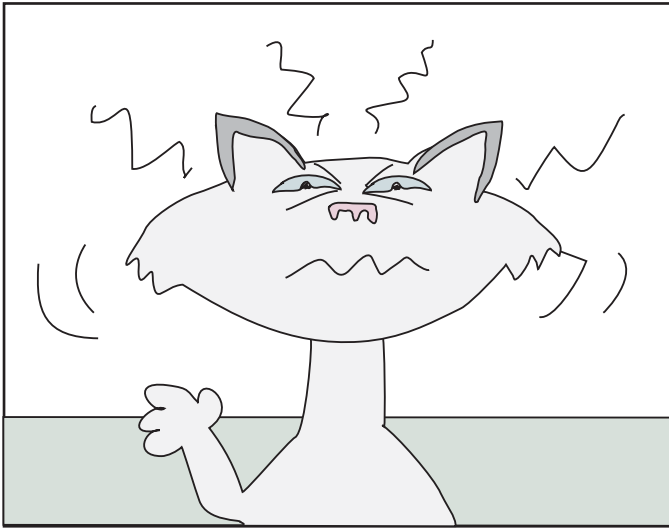

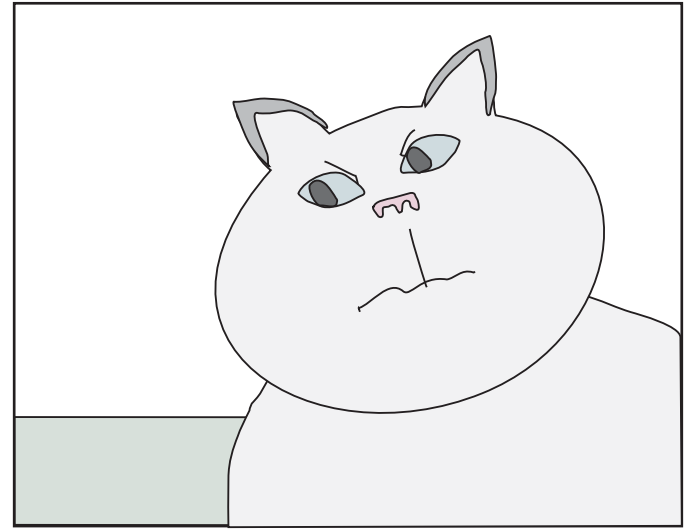

“I am mad,”
says tim. “I am
mad because the rabbit
almost cut off your
leg.”

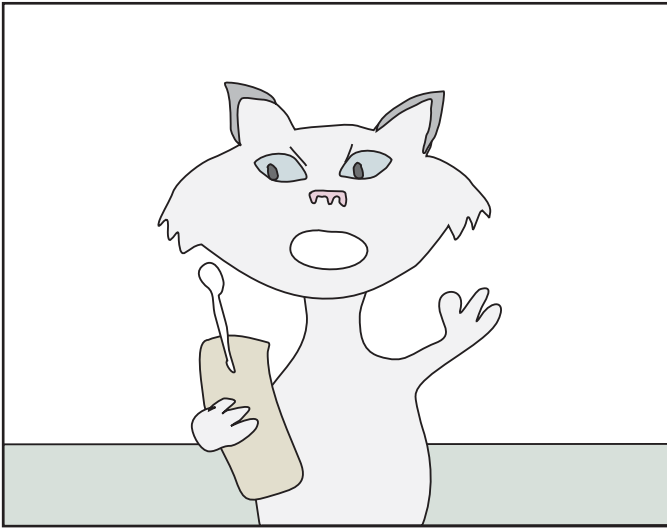

tom shakes his head.
“I am not mad.
I am happy because I still have my lovely little
leg.”

“Ooooooh,” says tim.
“I am so mad
that I could hit
him - hit him
a lot.”

“Oh, no, no,” says tom.
“That would be bad.
You can't hit people.”

“Then I am going to call a cop and tell him that the rabbit is a bad, bad doctor.”

By accident, tim calls
the rabbit next door.
“Helloooo?” says the rabbit.
“can I help you?”

“I need a cop,” says
tim. “did I call
the right place?”

“Yes,” says the rabbit, putting a blue shoe on his head. “I am a cop,
and I will be there in
ten minutes.”

ten minutes later, the rabbit rings the doorbell.

“Oh, no,” says tim,
“not you!”

The rabbit takes a pen
and a pad of paper
from his pocket. “What seems to be the problem?”
asks the rabbit.

"You almost cut off my brother's leg," says
tim. "You are a bad
doctor!"

"but now I am a cop," says the rabbit.
"Tell me about this bad,
bad doctor."

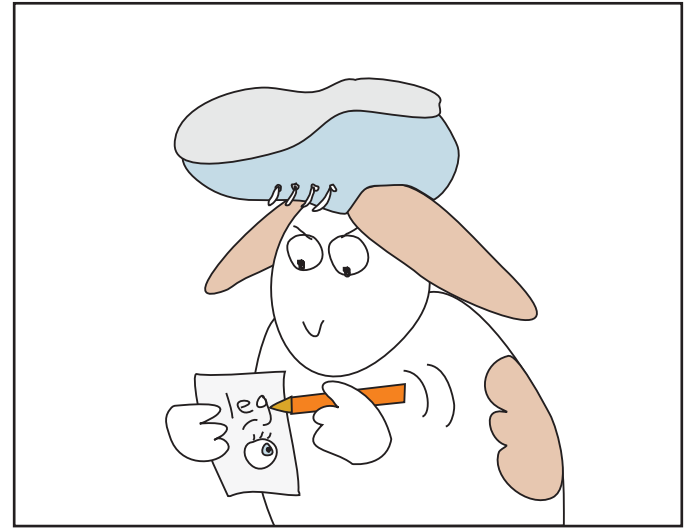

"Didn't you hear me?" says
tim. "YOU are the
bad doctor!"

"And the leg," says
the rabbit. "Where is the leg?"

“This is my leg. I have ten legs, you know.”

The rabbit scribbles some notes on his pad of paper. “And where is the bad doctor who almost cut off your leg?”

"You!" says tim. "You are the bad doctor
who almost cut off my brother's leg."

"Then I shall have to arrest myself," says the rabbit. "Do you have a
bed?"

"Right here," says tom.

"This is the bed."

The rabbit lies takes off his shoe and lies down on the bed.

"What are you doing?"

asks tim.

“I am taking a rest,”
says the rabbit.

“Wait!” says tim. “When REAL police arrest people, they take them to prison!”

but the rabbit was already asleep.

“How nice,” says tom.
“The rabbit is taking a rest.”

"Aaah! I give up!" says
tim.

tom smiles. "Good.
Now let's make a cup
of tea for when the rabbit wakes up."
