This is the letter "v." The letter "v" says "-vuh-" like in violin, vase, vacuum and vulture.

The letter "v" looks like two sticks, joined at the bottom.

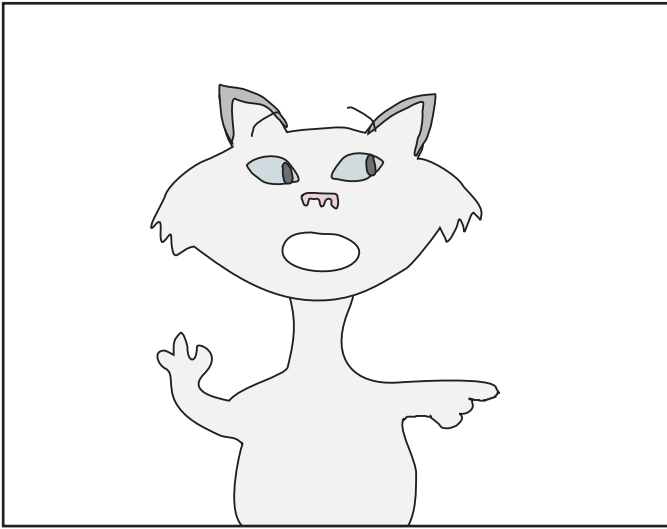

We can make the letter "v" with one hand.

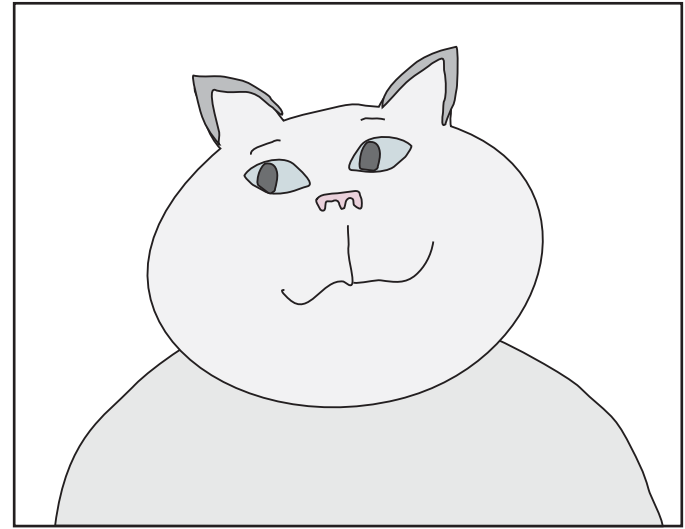

And what does the letter "v" say? (Have the child make the letter "v" sound several times.)

There is one word in this book that uses the letter "v."
Can you read it?

“Today, we are going
to see a vet,” says tim to tom. “I
am sick and tired of
your bad hearing.”

tom smiles. “if you
are feeling sick and tired,
maybe you should go to
bed and take a nice,
long nap.”

“See what I mean?” says
tim. “You never hear what I say. We are going to see a vet. Now!
Today!”

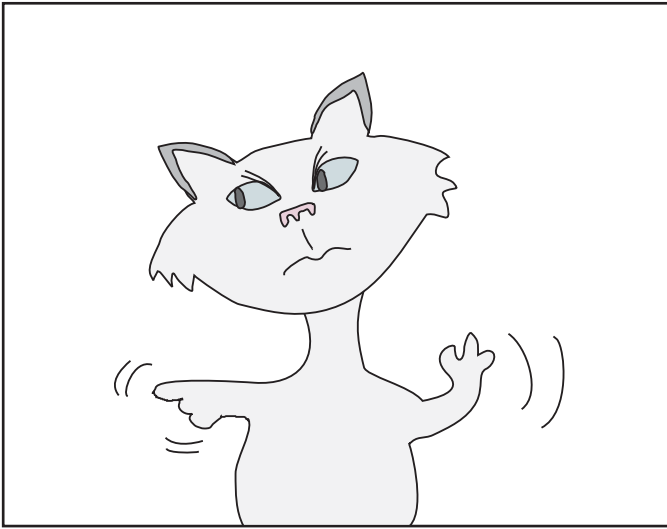

“Good morning,” says the
vet. “And what
can I do for you
fine, young kittens?”

"My brother has a really bad hearing problem,"
says tim. "When I
talk to him, he does not understand."

"Your hand?" asks the
vet. "Is there
something wrong with
your hand?"

"No, no, no," says tim,
pointing at tom.

"The problem is with
him. "He does not hear me when I speak."

"A squeak?" asks the
vet. "You have a squeak? No problem -
we can fix it."

Before tim can
say anything, the vet
lifts him up onto
the table.

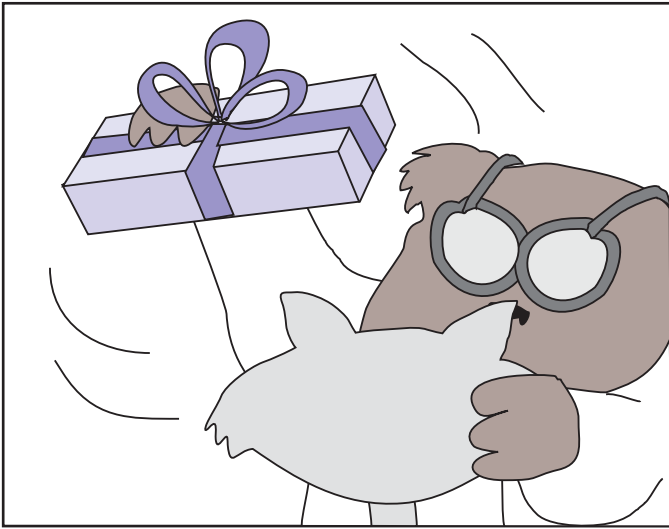

"Open wide," says the
vet. "Say 'aaaaah'...
Oh, my!"

The vet pulls a big
bag of potato chips
out of the mouth of
tim.

“tim ate the whole
bag?” says tom,
who is very surprised.

Then the vet pulls a
big box of chocolates
out of the mouth of
tim.

I was looking for those chocolates!" says tom.

Then the vet pulls a
big bowl of ice cream
out of the mouth of
tim.

"There," says the vet, wiping his hands. "I think
we got everything."

“Oh, my goodness,” says
tim. “Hey! I sound
different!”

“And now everyone can
hear you,” says tom
with a big smile.

The vet also smiles.

“Remember - it is

not good to talk

when your mouth is

“Oooops,” says tim.
